

Participatory Linguistics: Non-academic language expertise in linguistic research

Csanád Bodó PhD, Associate Professor, Eötvös Loránd University, Hungary

Noémi Fazakas PhD, Associate Professor, Sapientia Hungarian, University of Transylvania, Romania

János Imre Heltai PhD, Associate Professor, Károli Gáspár University of the Reformed Church in Hungary

Eszter Tarsoly PhD, Associate Professor, University College London

Symposium format:

- ReN symposium

Symposium mode:

- Hybrid

Sub-themes (multiple choices - delete the others):

- ☐ LINGUISTIC SOCIAL ISSUES: linguistic (in)justice, power, advocacy, attitude & bias, diversity-emancipation, discriminations, ethnicity and gender, ideology, language & social justice
- ☐ LANGUAGES IN SOCIETY: bilingualism, multilingualism, plurilingualism, multilingual classroom, translanguaging, literacy & literacies, heritage language, home language, migrants, deaf, sign/gesture
- ☐ RESEARCH: methods, approaches and (collaborative) practices

Argument:

The topic of the symposium will be participatory linguistics, aiming at an overview and synthesis of different approaches in different fields, such as applied linguistics, sociolinguistics, linguistic anthropology and linguistic ethnography. One or two featured speakers will be invited, who present their research. The convenors present papers on the ReN activities. The symposium will be open to applied linguists and researchers from related fields and also to non-academic participants in linguistic projects.